A Mixed Fight

Next Tuesday night one Max Baer will climb into the boxing ring with a colored youth, Joe Louis, and it is presumed that the winner will later face James J. Braddock for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The colored race has produced many splendid boxers and fighters, but the Times Virginian can see no justification for mixed bouts.

There are many fine colored baseball players, yet there is no chance for them to play in the big leagues. If fighters like Joe Louis must be recognized, let them oppose men of their own race. Max Baer will gain little in engaging in a mixed bout.

The era of Jack Johnson should be recalled as an example of what results from mixed bouts, and just now there seems to be no Jess Willard about.

What Stops Il Duce.

Many are looking to the conferences at Geneva in their hope for peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel. However, we are of the opinion that just now the most practical hope for peace is the British NAVY.

Whoevercontrols Suez and Gibralter controls Italian hopes in Africa. British warships and AIRSHIPS to defend those key bases will be the last pressure to head off Il Duce. If he ignores that, and frankly we fear that he is so committed at home he will ignore it, then Europe is in for WAR.

And Now To The Right

Franklin Roosevelt is a smart political analyist. During the past session of congress he went a long way to the "left" to head off any popular appeal Huey Long might have. He virtually stole Huey's thunder."

Now with the king of the Louisiana cannibales out of the way by means of a lamentable assassination you can look for Roosevelt to go equally as far to the "right." And it will be good strategy because there is no where else for Long's following to go but to Roosevelt in 1936.

Everything I am I owe to honest advertising, says Sally Rand. There is one case where the bare truth certainly paid.— Washington Evening Journal.

The fastest runner in the world recently got married. He's no wobegon. — Thomason (Ga.) Times.

Here's The Answer

The merchant who says that everyone knows he is in business and therefore he doesn't have to advertise may be found right here in Camden as well as other communities. He reminds us of the same merchant who says that customers come to him when in need of the goods he handles so why should he waste money in advertising? An answer has been made to that question by a newspaper whose advertising man no doubt stumbled into place. He says that where the owner possessed that type of mind, the question of "Why should I advertise?" the following reply is the usual one: "Everybody knows all that happens here, so what's the use of reporting the news about the use of having a newspaper?"

If the community does get along without a number of other things which are of value. For instance, the adult are less apt to read and teach the children, thus doing away with need of the schools. The parents are religious, therefore they can train the young ones in the creeds, thus doing away with the necessity of paying a minister and supporting a church. Finally, lend their money to one another and thereby eliminate banks. The courts would be little old settlers or learn how to make homespun, thereby greatly reducing expense and doing away with the necessity of supporting the purveying the clothing merchant out of business.

All trad, is based upon a desire for goods. Necessity is mostly an argument destroyer. Advertising is the function of reminding people of their requirements. It is generally some of professor and arts. Lawing function a prime factor in all progress and prosperity. In the creating of new desires therefore, stimulating trade and making possible the greatest enjoyment.—the Camden (Maine) Herald.

Astronomers say the distance to some of the stars has been greatly exaggerated. But it is still hard to interview Garbo.—Omaha World-Herald.

Feeding Civilians Instead of Armies

More Profitable Than Waging Wars

WHEN you have read "Paths of Glory", probably the most talked-of book on the Great War since "All Quiet on the Western Front", it seems rather inconsiderate to discuss foods that keep armies fit. You find yourself asking—fit for what?

It is well, however, to consider the use of some of these foods which military authorities have found sustaining for soldiers, to make for a race of better civilians.

Foremost, among army rations, probably, is canned meat. "Bully Beef" has come down in war songs and stories with as many versions as there are verses to "Mademoiselle from Armentieres". And for the housewife, who is keeping her family fit and with sufficient energy for "the last long mile", canned meat has a distinct use.

To Keep Them Fit

Suppose, for example, that there are lunches to be prepared before school for hikes, three after swimming, after tennis, or some party or action. The steak in the refrigerator is reserved for dinner, yet a vegetable luncheon is not sustaining enough. It is simple to go to the pantry, and choose at will between canned corned beef, veal loaf, ham loaf, tongue or any of the many canned meats.

It is important to know delicious ways to prepare these meats to vary them. Ham loaf is particularly good with pineapple. Veal loaf may be served with fresh asparagus. It is tempting canned chicken a la king on toast and cheese is a very sustaining meal. Take the cream sauce from the chicken and add a can of tuna and garnish with hard cooked eggs.

How your MONEY
WORKS FOR YOU IN A
Checking Account

When you put your money in a savings account you get interest on it. In a checking account you get service for it—and let the bank draw the interest. In return for this interest the bank gives you privileges worth far more to you than the interest itself.

When you maintain a balance commensurate with your use of your checking account privileges, the bank will be reimbursed for the expense of serving you. Otherwise, the bank may properly look to you to meet this expense.

Money in a checking account is an investment that pays you real dividends.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Thedford's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

CORN GIVES

"GIVE!" says the jazz band leader. "Give," says the singer—it's all you've got. Remember the song you used to sing in Kindergarten, "Give, said the little stream, as it wandered down the hill?"

To give, you've got to have—whether it's a crooning radio voice or ability for work. If you have energy — then you've got something. Fred Astaire has it, so has Ginger Rogers and many another stage and screen star whose gift we are apt to sum up in one word—personality."

Where to get it? From foods. Energy-giving foods like corn, in delicious dishes like these:

Corn and Walnut Loaf: Drain the contents of one can of No. 2 whole grain corn and run the corn through a food chopper. Add one-half cup of chopped walnuts, two beaten eggs, one-half cup milk and one-half cup crumbs. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake for 45 minutes in a moderate oven — 375 degrees. Serve with tomato sauce. This serves four persons.

Energy for Half a Dozen

Scalloped Corn and Celery: Bring one cup of diced celery and one-fourth cup of diced green pepper to boiling in salted water. Drain. Put alternate layers of corn, celery and peppers, seasoned with salt and pepper, in a baking dish. Use all the contents of one No. 2 can of corn. Pour over one-half cup of milk and cream. Bake forty-five minutes or until the celery is tender. Have the oven moderately hot — 375 degrees. This serves six persons.

Corn and Bacon Omelet: Fry six slices of bacon until crisp. Remove and break into small pieces. Drain the contents of one No. 2 can of whole grain corn. Add to the hot bacon fat and fry golden brown. Add the bacon, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Meanwhile make an omelet for six persons. Just before folding the omelet over, pour over the corn and bacon. Then fold over, cook for a moment, and serve at once. This serves six persons."
